He refused and then, he said, they jumped upon him and kicked him and forced him to give up the check. A badiy bruised eye and forehead proved that he had received rough treatment. Rasmussen said they then put him in the buggy and the marshal sat on him all the way to town. When they arrived there they locked him up in the jail. He said they later intimidated him and forced him to endorse the check, then cashed it and paid the bill. They then arraigned him before Justice Marriott for attempting to leave without paying his board bill. But as the bill had been paid the defendant was told to leave town, so he said.

The three defendants were arrested by Deputy Sheriff Dowse and brought before Judge Kroeger yesterday afternoon. They were arraigned and pleaded not guilty to the charge. They were placed under $500 bonds each and the case will probably be tried today or tomorrow.

Mr. Tompkins had never given this

"Why, why," said he, stumblingly, "it's

"Well," said Tommy, "since I'm your

Mr. Tompkins gazed in blank amazement at Tommy. Slowly the significance

"Take it, Thomas. When you really do misfortune to have a son who is smarter

"Oh, no, she don't care," said the small boy, moving cautiously out of reach. "she ain't got the chance. You've got her in your hat."

At the conclusion of the speech Mr.

Mr. Bryan began his address to the students with the declaration that what all should desire was triumph of truth, rather than the triumph of that which any particular person might think to be true. He was at once on the best of terms with the student audience, the applause being frequent and hearty.

Mr. Bryan said that if future events should prove that he was wrong in this campaign, he could rejoice at his own defeat. He said if even they could prove that those who differed from him were wrong and the verdict of 1896 should be reversed in 1900, they, too, ought to rejoice.
